Administrator's Column

Social Media can be a powerful tool for good, yet can damage and destroy. We strongly encourage parents to monitor their children's accounts and dialogue often about the good, the bad, and even the "ugly" of it. One rule of thumb? Don't post anything that you wouldn't want the whole world to see. It can potentially influence future hiring opportunities, relationships (you can't "unsay" it, even if you delete it), and have lasting consequences. Looking for approval through posts, pictures, status updates - not the place for a teen (or anyone) to seek value.
