Administrator's Column

In an article comparing Christian versus public education, a Christian school teacher comments, "I love Christian education!" and continues to comment on the question, Do you think Christian schools are safer for your children or for you as an employee? "I've worked in both public and Christian schools and have experienced a clear difference in the atmosphere of caring and support both among students and teachers." She went on to comment that not only do Christian schools prepare students for the challenges of Christianity both in serving others and sharing the gospel; there is a safety factor in the Christian school that is not as prevalent in public schools generally speaking, and feeling safe has a positive effect on learning.
